NARCISSUS FLORALS

a fresh season

As color blooms with the first breath of spring, we're delighted to welcome a new season of elegance, celebration, and connection. Spring brings so many meaningful moments and lays the path for the seasons' most popular upcoming moments from family gatherings, proms, Mother's Day, graduations, and the even just the simple joy of brightening a home with fresh blooms. We are even more excited to help bring to life any themed events for any occasion these coming months as the ideas have already been rolling in like our most recent farmers market themed event. It's a season made for flowers, and we are already creating vibrant arrangements that capture its energy and optimism.

What makes this time of year especially exciting at Narcissus Florals is the opportunity to share what we love most: exceptional floral artistry rooted in passion, craftsmanship, and community. For decades, our family owned studio has been dedicated to elevating life's moments through flowers. Every arrangement is thoughtfully designed by artisans who understand not only the beauty of each bloom, but the emotion behind every gift. From lush seasonal stems to custom creations, our team pours heart, skill, and imagination into pieces that feel personal, expressive, and unforgettable.

We take pride in being more than a florist, we're a place where creativity thrives, where relationships matter, and where every guest is welcomed with warmth. Whether you're celebrating a milestone, honoring a tradition, or simply embracing the joy of spring, our designers are here to help you tell your story through flowers.

We invite you to step into either of our beautiful locations in Toms River or Spring Lake and experience the artistry of Narcissus Florals firsthand. ## behind the blooms:

MEET LIANA

Since joining Narcissus Florals in 2022, Liana has brought a romantic, garden-gathered feel to every arrangement she creates... think English cottage garden with a touch of storybook charm.

Her love of flowers began early, tagging along to garden centers with her mom and planting side by side. Though she started her career in cosmetics marketing, she ultimately traded corporate life for creativity and never looked back. "I had never felt more sure and happy with a decision than I have in this," she shares.

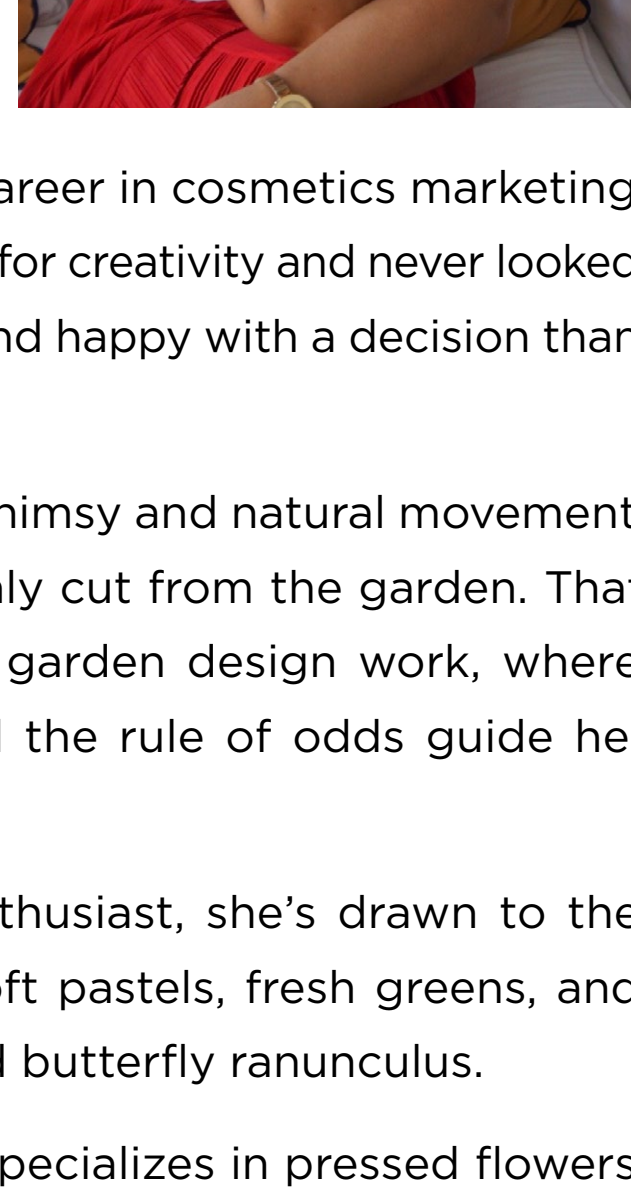

Liana's design style is rooted in whimsy and natural movement, often inspired by what feels freshly cut from the garden. That same sensibility carries into her garden design work, where principles like color, texture, and the rule of odds guide her approach.

A self-proclaimed late spring enthusiast, she's drawn to the fleeting beauty of the season; soft pastels, fresh greens, and blooms like Icelandic poppies and butterfly ranunculus.

Outside of Narcissus, Liana also specializes in pressed flowers, preserving blooms as lasting keepsakes. "It allows you to hold onto a moment in time," she says. From wedding bouquets to memorial flowers, her work often carries deep emotional meaning.

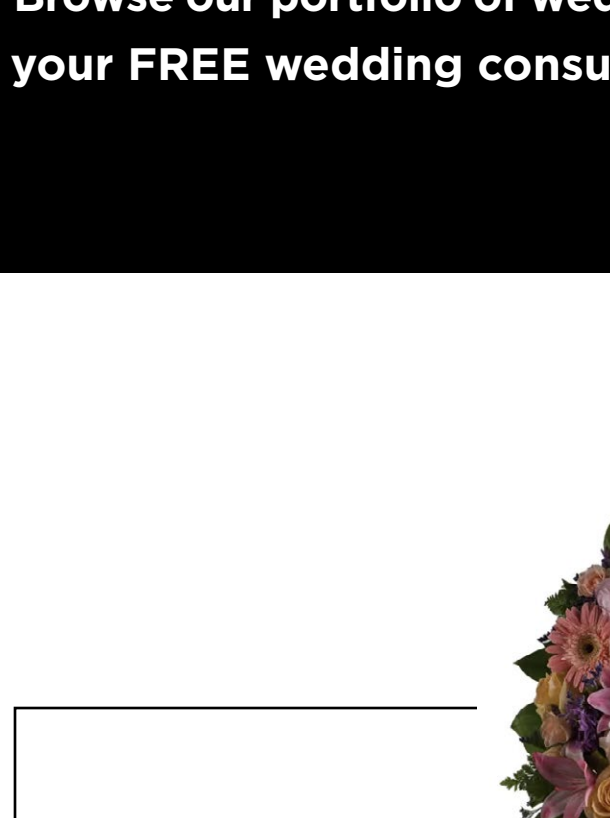

One standout Narcissus project? A late-summer wedding featuring rich, layered tones and a flower-blocked bar arrangement of hydrangea, dahlias, and Queen Anne's lace, equal parts bold and romantic.

At the heart of her work is a simple intention: to create something beautiful enough to make people pause and take it in.

HAPPILY EVER AFTER

Wedding season has arrived, and 2026 is shaping up to be a love letter to romance. This season, it's all about romance in full bloom...elevated, expressive, and unmistakably personal.

The Return of Romanticism

Think lush garden roses, delicate movement, and designs that feel almost pulled from the scenes of Bridgerton. Florals are looser, more organic, and layered with texture, capturing that timeless, just-picked elegance.

Soft Meets Bold

Color palettes are telling deeper stories, from dreamy tones like champagne and lilac to unexpected pops of rich, saturated hues. It's less about matching and more about mood.

Immersive Florals

From floral chandeliers to meadow-style aisles, wedding florals are stepping beyond the table and transforming entire spaces into living works of art.

At Narcissus Florals, we're seeing couples embrace florals as more than décor, they're setting the tone, creating atmosphere, and telling a story. Our designers specialize in bringing your vision to life with picture-perfect centerpieces, ceremony décor, cake accents, and so much more!
